carpetbaggers and the negroes have brought upon the once proud old Commonwealth. The Washington Chromical and the regretation of the President's personal organs, thus speaks of the recent election for Lightly States Senator.

We have no personal knowledge of the Sanator-elect, or of his competitors, with a single exception. We cannot, therefore, be supposed to have personal feeling in relation to any of the parties. It is in behalf of the character of the United States Senate and the vital interests of the country we plead, when asking that honest men and the vital interests of the country we plead, when asking that honest men of all parties set their faces as flint contributions, but the heart is out of the of all parties set their faces as mint against the demoralization and degradation that is coming upon the country through the wholesale corruption practiced in some of the Southern Legislatures. When it comes to be openly boasted weeks beforehand that such and such a man has the means to buy his a most expressive term—genuine Saxon such a man has the means to buy his way to the highest dignities in the land, and that his emissaries are on the line of march, provided with the sinews of war, confident of success, in what estimate will those bodies soon it held whose members thus compass their success? What safety is there for liberty and public virtue when it is intrusted to such hands? Is there no sense of shame, and public virtue when it is intrusted to marked—the ring that we have such hands? Is there no sense of shame, seen worn—these simple tokens often no quickened apprehension of impending danger, that will serve to place a check upon this incoming flood of corruption? Has the Senate of the United States no dark to referm in this iron. States no duty to perform in this june-ture? Does it owe nothing to itself, to its legree of sensibility which showed how ture? Does it owe nothing to itself, to its legree of sensibility which showed how self-respect, to the good name that made good a judge the giver was of the true self-respect, to the good name that made it the glory of the country in other days. The country look—as also to the Holse of Representatives—to strike a blow, when opportunity presents, that will leave no room to doubt its views of the attempt to reach a seat in the legislative councils of the nation by bribery and unblashing corruption.

All the information from South Carolina concurs in asserting that Patterson secured his election by downright bribery. This poor, unfortunate State is cursed with negro rule, and, of course, everything withers as though the State was shaded by a huge upas, distilling poison, disease and death. South Carolina has a negro Governor, a negro. Leutenant Governor, and two negro State officers. Four out of five of its Congressmen are negroes. The Speakers of both Houses of the Legislative doubt. It is hard to believe that such a story can be true of men of ordinary human sagacity. Many of the Southern States have sent agents to Europe to induce emigration, but I found the crudest notions prevailing in the South as to the whole scope and nature of immigration. Most of the people conceive the immigrant to be some kind of a beast, who will be a substitute of the negro, and work not for himself but for them—the old residents. It is unnecessary to say that no such man exists whose services will be worth the price of his passage money. There is a provincial prejudice in the South against new-comers who would exercise any influence, and a man is called a stranger in the South who steps into the bath-room, and thence would exercise any influence, and a man is called a stranger in the South who go also and suffice and trusted domestic of many and orntinuous emigration is never led by more brutes, but by men of faculties and audacity, who go ahead and their constituency follows.
